In the ninth inning, with two men on bases, Wittee was instructed to walk Schiel. He did so, pitching the ball four feet from the plate. The last ball, however, slipped from his hand and salled over Marshall's head, allowing Delehanty to score the winning run. Willies claims that just as he started to pitch Schiel jumped scross the plate, and for fear of hittims him he momentarily besitated and the ball got beyond his control. Under the rules Schiel would have been declared out for jumping out of the box.
